500 joint stock companies at work with an aggregate paid up capital of 154 millions of rupees; now there are 923 companies with a paid up capital of 236 million rupons. Of this 96 millions is in spinning and weaving mills of all kinds, but chiefly cotton mills. The progress in this particular direction, however, is likely to be checked for a time, as over shundant supplies of outton yarns have roudered the industry temporarily unprofitable. Next to mills come tex-plantations with a paid up capital of 34 millioner and then banking and loan companies with a capital of 30 millions Both these latter, however, show a decline on the previous year's totals, and the probability is that the growth during the next few years will be in some of the other industries which, so far, do not seem to have been worked very largely on the joint stock principle.

SHAOHSING.

5th November, 1891. The weather is now all that could be desired Farmers are getting in their crops with a will. The sun has been so hot the last few days that boys in the country are in a perfect nude state, romping among the sheaves and rice-straw which lies before every farm-house door in large heaps, waiting to be threshed or stacked. It is so warm that enakes have not yet become torpid; for a poor man, who gets his living by solling or exchanging course straw paper, was in the habit of putting his paper and his few sarnings in a broken hollow wall of his house. On going to get his money the other day, and on thrusting his hand into the hole, a poisonous suske fastened itself on him, and bit him severely. At last he shook it off, and it much swollen from his hand right up to his shoulder that his friends, who administered all sorts of Chinese antidotes without any good effect, becoming alarmed took him sway to his native village, where he now lies in a precarious state and not much hope of his recovery. This pleasant weather brings the country children to the water's edge to paddle in the water and play at "catching fish." A mother having lots of children allowed one of them, only three years old, to steal away to the side of a large pond, with its nucle and elder brother who were going to fish: No one noticed the little thing amongst the buey trifles, all around; the brother and uncle had pushed off to a bamboo barrier, where lots of fish were supposed to have gathered together. The child must have cropt down the stone stope all right, till it came to the last one, when it must have gently slipped into the water, for no notice was taken of its absence, till a passing boatman shouted out to the people on shore that some of their clothes had fallen, into the water, and were being driven away by the wind. The mother, who was just then making an article of clothing for this very child, turned round and bastily glanced at all the little ones about her, when to her horror and dismay she discovered her three year old little girl was missing. Alas! she soon perceived that the supposed bundle of clothes was her own shild !

SUCCESSFUL RAIN-MARING EXPERIMENTS IN INDIA.

MADRAS, 29th October, Further rain-making experiments were carried ont by Mr. Wolfe-Murray, the Collector of Ouddapah, on the 25th instant. There was no wind to fly a kite and so the dynamite was exploded by fuses on a rock at an elevation of 2,400 feet above the sea and 200 feet above the plain. Ten packages of dynamite of tea pounds weight each were placed on the rock about fifty yards apart. One fuse failed to light The consussions were felt hundreds of yards distant. About six hours after the explosions, with the sau still shining, came a magnificent shower of rain unaccompanied with wind. There was no thunder till the rain passed over. The shower lasted half an hour when the channels of running water and the tanks received a small supply. The day was rather cloudless than otherwise, The rain which fell gauged about one inch over a portion of its area, which is estimated at thirty equare miles. The heaviest rain was not at the site of the explosion but a mile further away. Optside of the dynamite rain area, there was only an ordinary drizzle. The cost of the explesions was within two hundred rupees.
